INTRODUCTION

This document provides 2002 information on solid waste management in the State of New Hampshire. Every year, all the solid waste facilities in New Hampshire are required to submit an Annual Facility Report form to DES. The information from this form is entered into a database that gives DES the ability to track solid waste composition and generation, disposal capacity, recycling, and composting activities.

The information collected is used to generate reports, graphs, tables, and maps that summarize waste management in New Hampshire for a specific calendar year. In addition, the information is available to the public on the DES's website at www.des.nh.gov.

Defining Municipal and Non-Municipal Solid Waste

There are three important definitions necessary to understanding New Hampshire's waste generation. Municipal solid waste (MSW) consists of durable and non-durable goods, containers, packaging, food waste, yard waste, and other organic material from homes (residential waste) and similar wastes from businesses and institutions (commercial waste). Non-MSW consists of all solid waste materials not classified as MSW and includes wastewater treatment facility sludge, non-hazardous industrial solid wastes, street sweepings, and construction and demolition waste (C&D).

C&D, as well as ash waste from waste incinerators, dominate the non-MSW category, with smaller amounts consisting of waste water treatment facility sludge, recycling residuals, contaminated soils, and other wastes that may include industrial solid wastes. C&D waste is comprised of debris generated from construction, renovation, repair, and demolition of roads, bridges, and buildings and includes wood, steel, concrete, masonry, plaster, metal, and asphalt, but not wood from land-clearing, i.e., stumps, logs, brush, and soil, or rock from excavations (U.S. EPA, 1996).

SOLID WASTE GENERATION

Total waste generation in New Hampshire in 2002 is estimated at 1,560,490 tons, including residential and commercial sources and construction/demolition (C&D) debris. New Hampshire's residential and commercial/industrial generation (excluding C&D waste) decreased about 3.3 percent over the previous year. Separately, residential generation was 730,515 tons, a decrease of 2.9 percent over the previous year and commercial/industrial waste (615,400 tons) decreased by 3.8 percent from 2001. C&D wastes totaled 238,001 tons, down from 256,648 tons in 2001.

The national per capita generation rate, as reported in 2000 by EPA was 4.5 pounds per person per day of residential and commercial/industrial waste. New Hampshire's rate for 2002 was 5.7 pounds per person per day.

MANAGEMENT OF SOLID WASTE

Table 2 depicts estimates for how residential and commercial solid waste (not including C&D) was managed in New Hampshire in 2002. Table 3 estimates the total amount of C&D that was processed or disposed of within New Hampshire, or exported to other states.

Construction and demolition debris typically is either 1) disposed of in a landfill, 2) processed for reuse, 3) burned as fuel if permitted, or 4) salvaged by secondary building materials markets. The predominant activity is the processing of C&D into landfill cover, aggregates or fuel. C&D processing decreased in 2002 due to the closure of Petrofiber, Inc. in Henniker, which processed wood chips for biofuel until its closure, while C&D disposal rose slightly to 120,858 tons.

SOLID WASTE RECYCLING IN NH

Municipal and commercial recycling in New Hampshire continued to increase in 2002, both in total and as a percentage of waste disposal. Municipal recycling activities in 2002 totaled 111,295 tons, increasing from 107,691 tons in 2001, an increase of 2.4 percent. Commercial recycling activities also increased in 2002 to 177,317 tons, an 8.1 percent increase from 161,895 tons in 2001. From 2001 to 2002, New Hampshire's total solid waste generation dropped, making the increase in recycling activities a larger percentage of the total waste stream. Taken together, the state's recycling rate in 2002 was 27 percent, up from 25 percent in 2001.

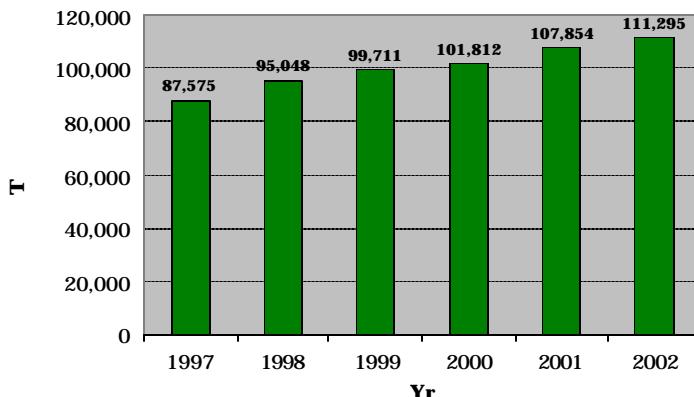

In New Hampshire recycling on a per person basis was 1.24 pounds per day in 2002, an increase from 1.17 pounds per person per day in 2001. This is just below the 1.4 national per capita recycling rate reported by EPA in 2000. (Municipal Solid Waste in the United States: 2000 Facts and Figures, EPA 2000.)

Recycling is the series of activities by which discarded post consumer materials are collected, sorted, processed, converted into raw materials, and used in the production of new products. (U.S. EPA)

An annual DES survey indicates that commercial recycling activities have also increased over the last three years. The commercial recycling estimate gained through the survey is considered a "minimum" value to assign to recycling activities that have been verified and related to businesses and other non-municipal entities. The survey form can be obtained from the Technical Assistance Section at 271-3713.

PROJECTED SOLID WASTE MANAGEMENT CAPACITY NEEDS

The goal of capacity analysis is to evaluate long-term supply and projected demand. This involves estimating how much waste will be generated and how much permitted capacity is available in landfills and incinerators to dispose of that waste. This determination is complex due to the variety of factors that influence the estimate, such as population, growth, economic climate, the level of diversion of the waste stream, and levels of imports.

New Hampshire's permitted disposal capacity is projected to be adequate for residential and commercial solid waste until 2013 (see Figure 5), at which time the state's largest, private landfill located in Rochester (Turnkey Landfill, Waste Management, Inc.) will have filled its currently permitted capacity.

Solid Waste Capacity Projections for
New Hampshire (2003- 2022)

□ Available Capacity

DES has developed documents and spreadsheets to assist permit applicants in demonstrating a need for capacity in the state. Using this information will allow DES to evaluate capacity demonstrations in a consistent, approved format. The information may be found at www.des.nh.gov or can be obtained by contacting the Solid Waste Technical Assistance Section at 271- 6847.

The University of New Hampshire Cooperative Extension has played an active role in recycling efforts in the state. Typically, the Cooperative Extension has identified and initiated projects in specific areas, rather than committing dedicated staff to an ongoing program in recycling. In 1990- 91, for example, Cooperative Extension developed a kindergarten through twelfth grade educational curriculum on source reduction and recycling for statewide distribution, while in 1992- 94, Cooperative Extension took a leadership role promoting municipal leaf and yard waste composting and source separated food waste composting in New Hampshire. Additionally, Cooperative Extension has worked with DES and New Hampshire industry and continues to play an integral part in the Wood Ash Program, and in providing composting education at the Solid Waste Facility Operator Training Workshops.

Founded in 1981 as a private, non-profit organization, the Northeast Resource Recovery Association (NRRA) provides technical, educational, and marketing support to New Hampshire municipal recycling programs. NRRA provides marketing and brokerage services for municipalities in New Hampshire, Maine and Vermont. This cooperative approach combines materials from many communities to gain economies of scale in transportation, and offering access to markets which would typically be denied to individual small communities. NRRA also provides extensive outreach and technical assistance to its member communities designed to strengthen and expand municipal recycling activities. The NRRA has been instrumental in establishing a plastics recycling plant that is scheduled to begin operations in 2003 in Milton, New Hampshire.
